

A beautiful coastal location

Welcome. Historic Northrepps Cottage Country Hotel is one of East Anglia's finest bijoux hotels from where you can enjoy the delights of beautiful North Norfolk. The hotel is located close to Cromer and The Broads, the striking white sands and marram dunes of the coastline, the natural beauty of the salt marshes and a clutch of historic towns.

The atmosphere inside 'the Cottage' is one of luxurious warmth, from the welcoming reception hall through to the contemporary Humphry's Bar and fine dining in Repton's Restaurant.

Our individual suites effortlessly combine classic and stylish décor reflecting their elegant history, with the height of modern comfort, luxurious features and a refined and peaceful atmosphere.

When looking for a country hotel on the North Norfolk coast, look no further than Northrepps Cottage - truly a place to call your home from home.

The past and the present

Northrepps Cottage was built by Bartlett Gurney on the Northrepps Estate in 1793. It was designed in gothic style by William Wilkins of Norwich, with input from Sir Humphry Repton (above) who designed the gardens. Two of its best known residents were the 'Cottage ladies'

Anna Gurney and Sarah Buxton.

Despite being crippled and in a wheelchair, Anna Gurney was always on the cliff tops and beaches when storms raged, directing rescue operations with a cannon on her lap to fire a line out to stricken vessels to rescue those aboard. She invented and funded the installation of a breeches buoy. Anna Gurney was a great linguist, so every shipwrecked sailor was brought to the Cottage where they were dried out, given a new set of clothes, a bible and enough money for their passage home.

Through the years, the Cottage has received many famous visitors, including the great prison and social reformer Elizabeth Fry (nee Gurney). It was used as a private house for the Gurney family right up until the late sixties.

In 2009, after extensive renovations, Simon and Deborah Gurney opened the Cottage as a splendid country hotel.
